Four Hudson Vicinage Probation Division Staff to Receive CPONJ Awards

Four Hudson Vicinage Probation Division staff will be honored with Chief Probation Officers of New Jersey (CPONJ) awards on Friday, July 22 at the Richard J. Hughes Justice Complex, 25 Market St., Trenton. Each will receive a certificate of outstanding achievement in recognition of their local and statewide contributions.

Michelle Blue, a court services supervisor 2 in child support enforcement, has served as part of multiple committees and programs and displays leadership through her interactions with customers and her focus on staff training and development.

Kim Chimento, a senior probation officer in juvenile supervision, has participated in various working groups and initiatives and exhibits her commitment to improving the lives of juveniles through her regular involvement in activities.

Kim Mack, a court services supervisor 2 in the drug court program, has contributed to several committees and training programs and has played an integral role in the success of Hudson Vicinage Drug Court since its implementation.

Lynn Muller, an investigator in child support enforcement, has facilitated trainings, serves as the vicinage liaison for multiple initiatives, and consistently provides excellent service to all customers.

“Trial Court Administrator Silvia Gonzalez and I are proud of the Hudson Vicinage award recipients, and we appreciate the dedication and professionalism they consistently show in carrying out the important functions of the Probation Division,” Assignment Judge Peter Bariso Jr. said. “They, along with their colleagues, work diligently each day to ensure the welfare and safety of children, families, and the community.”
